INT./EXT. CAR - NIGHT

Mara climbs in, pulling the door shut with a hollow thud. Evan sits in the driver's seat, the engine already idling.

MARA
(whispering)
I’m sorry.

Evan stares straight through the windshield as he shifts into gear.

EVAN Yeah...

Mara looks down at her feet. Evan glances at her, catching the way her shoulders are hunched. He softens.

EVAN (cont’d)
For what?

Mara just shrugs.

EVAN (cont’d)
Mara? Baby, what happened back there?

She shakes her head, wiping under her eyes.

MARA
It’s stupid. I shouldn’t have said anything. Just... forget it.

EVAN
No, talk to me. Did someone say something to you?

She finally exhales, her voice sounding thin and fragile.

MARA
I just... I felt really alone tonight.

EVAN
I was only gone for a minute. I went to get you a drink!

Mara flinches.

MARA
I know. It’s fine. It’s just... When you walked away, someone said—
(she stops herself)
Never mind.

EVAN
What did they say?

Mara looks down at her hands, twisting her rings until her knuckles turn white.

MARA
(soft, embarrassed)
“I didn’t know you two were together.”

Evan lets out a short, confused breath.

EVAN
Mara... That’s it?

Mara’s head snaps up.

EVAN (cont’d)
What I mean is.. of course we’re together.

Mara throws her hands up, the frustration finally boiling over.

MARA
Really? Because you could’ve fooled me!

EVAN
(lowering his voice)
So because I wasn't hovering over you for five minutes, we’re suddenly strangers? Is that how this works?

MARA
Apparently!

EVAN
We are not strangers!