EXT. FRONT DOOR - DAY

A static shot of the front door from the inside. a beat A foot goes through the door. Tom sticks his head into the hole looking around at the damage.

TOM
Looks like someone needs a new door!

The owner comes running screaming.

SHELBY
Who the hell are you! What did you do to my door?!?

Tom reaches in and open the door. Keeping his head in the hole until the door is completely open. He stands up. Then he steps inside, brushing off sawdust, inspecting the damage like a home inspector.

TOM
This thing can not do! This thing looks like it was installed by a blind squirrel with a grudge.

SHELBY
(dumbfounded)
You broke my door.

TOM (beaming)
I sure did! I like how that noggin works, kid!

SHELBY
(on the verge of tears)
W-who are you?

TOM
(suddenly in full salesman mode)
For just 5 payments of 17.95, that's right foes! 17 easy payments of 19.94 per month. Think about it! 25.72 a month and it's yours!

SHELBY
(lost in confusion)
H-h-how many months?!?

TOM
How many do you need it?

Beat. Silence. Tom slowly turns to a second camera that somehow now exists.

SHELBY
And if you order now? Buy one for the price of two! And get a second one absolutely free!
(beat)
if you pay for it. That's two for the price of three, folks!

(breaking into tears)
Why are you doing this?

Suddenly, from down the hallway, the squeaky sound of rubber on tile. LENARD, the tire guy, casually ROLLING a large tire past the door. He locks eyes with Tom. The air tightens with suffocating tension.

TOM
(narrowing eyes)
Lenard.

LENARD
(qua; menace)
Tom.

Lenard keeps it rolling and slowly the sound fades away.

EXT. LIVING-ROOM — MOMENTS LATER

Shelby, still teary-eyed but determined, hands over a stack of cash to Tom.

SHELBY
Fine! I'll take it! Just give me the door!

Tom hands over the BRAND NEW DOOR with a grin, he turns and start to walk out.

SHELBY (FRANTIC, HOLDING THE DOOR AWKWARDLY)
Wait, wait! Can you just fix my damn door?!

Tom pauses for a beat, looks at her with mock sympathy, then shakes his head.

TOM
Sorry! Just the salesman!

And with that, he slams the door behind him and bolts off, leaving Shelby holding the door, utterly dumbfounded and defeated.

SHELBY
(SHOUTING AFTER HIM)
You've gotta be kidding me!

Beat. The sound of squeaky rubber rolls down the hallway. LENARD enters, popping his head through the same hole in the doorframe, holding a knife and looking entirely too serious.

LENARD
Something's wrong with your car's tires.
